Naked Flight Makes Maiden Journey

The first naked flight has carried 87 passengers from Miami, Florida to Cancun, Mexico. The Castaways travel agency, which specialises in clothing optional getaways, offered the trip to the El Dorado Resort & Spa for Nude Week for $310. At cruising altitude, the passengers stripped off, but the captain and crew didn't. Hot coffee, tea and sexual antics were all banned, but at least the plane's cabin had climate control, reports the Miami Herald. Castaways co-owner Donna Daniels said: “These are professionals who lead very stressful lives and are ready to let it all go. They are adventurers and risk takers. They don't even want clothes as a constraint.” Naked travel is the fastest-growing segment of the business, said Daniels. “After 9/11, I didn't have any cancellations. Even after war broke out, we didn't have any cancellations on this trip. People feel safe on a flight like this.”

Eyes Down as J-Lo Ousts Dirty Gertie

Butlins [a famous bingo parlor in Britain] has given bingo a revamp by adding a host of modern references as rhyming slang for many of the numbers. Old favourites such as “legs eleven” (11), “two fat ladies” (88) and “clickety click” (66) remain but are be joined by “Gareth Gates” (8), “stroppy teen” (15) and “feng shui” (53). Butlins said it wanted to respond to fresh interest in bingo by replacing some of the terms first used more than 50 years ago. Thirty-two will go from being “buckle my shoe” to “Jenny Choo”—in honor of the famous shoe designer—while the reign of “Queen B” has ended in favor of “chamomile tea” for the number 73. Many of the terms were devised in the 1950s and gave an insight into popular language at the time. “Dirty Gertie” (30) will become “Ali G” after the comic character, “strive and strife” (75) becomes “on the skye”, “bang on the drum” (71) is changed to “J-Lo’s bum”, after singer Jennifer Lopez’s famous asset, and “Danny La Rue” (52) becomes “chicken vindalo”. Having words instead of numbers is thought to have been first used because machines which selected the numbers were slow and noisy. In addition, many bingo halls were run by colorful characters who liked to inject humor into the game. Many of the terms were no longer used after the 1970s after the balls were replaced by faster computer draws. Butlins is planning to use the alternatives names at its three resorts—Minehead, Skegness, and Bognor Regis.

Dudley Co-op Open House
SATURDAY, MAY 10, 2-4 PM AT 3 SACRAMENTO ST.

Dudley Co-op is an invaluable resource for undergraduates who are looking for an alternative or supplement to standard House life at Harvard. The Co-op is a small community of just 32 undergraduates, so members really get to know each other. The Co-op is cooperative, members purchase their own food, cook meals and take turns doing chores. Dudley House has a Master, a Senior Tutor, two graduate student Residential Tutors and administrative services like pre-law, pre-med, and fellowships advice as well as cultural, intellectual, outing, sports, etc. events. It is also economical; room and board fees are significantly less expensive than in Houses because members do their own upkeep. If you're interested in living in the Dudley Co-op, please get in touch with Residential Tutor, Jonathan Weiss, joweiss@law who does the initial orientation then you will meet with the Assistant Senior Tutor who will either put your name on the list or the waitlist. However, to get a real feel of the community you can make prior arrangements with one of the Residential Tutors to stop by for dinner at 3 Sacramento St.

Golden Nuggets
TIDBITS OF WISDOM FROM BRYAN’S FAVORITE SITCOM

Rose: I would have died if I'd ever caught my parents having sex.
Dorothy: You never walked in on them?
Rose: Ounce. But they were only playing leap-frog

Sophia: Alright, alright, I can take a hint. Picture it...
Dorothy: Ma, you're not gonna tell a story, are you?
Sophia: No, I'm gonna do shadow puppets. [does one]
See... an elephant eating a peanut. Of course I'm gonna tell a story.
