ROGUE MONKEY HARASSES PUPILS DURING CLASSES
Students at a New Delhi school are living in terror of a monkey that is having a free run of the classrooms. For the past fifteen days the animal has been disrupting lessons at the DTEA Senior Secondary School in Moti Bagh. It is reported to have snatched a student’s pen and chewed it for nearly an hour during a recent examination. A Class VII student told the Hindustan Times: “Now it fearlessly enters the classrooms and even takes out lice from students’ hair. It gets furious if a student runs away.” Fed up of the daily harassment students now say they want the animal immediately taken away from the school. The paper reported head teacher Jayalakshmi Seth said: “We have complained to the police and civic authorities.”

THIEF ALERT SIGN STOLEN
A sign warning drivers that thieves were in the area has been stolen. The notice had been up for only a few hours, reports the Daily Star. It had been clamped on the A14 near Cambridge, UK

WOMAN SELLS HUSBAND’S GRAVE
A Romanian woman has upset her dead husband’s family by digging up his body and selling the grave. It’s reported that the woman from Cristesti, Mures county, said she needed money. But in order to sell the plot the woman had to remove her husband’s remains. It’s believed she dumped them close to the cemetery. She told Adevarul newspaper: “Did I do anything wrong? Was that a crime? I don’t think so. I only dug him out and sold the grave because he was my husband - mine. I lived with him for 20 years and not his family.” The man’s relatives recovered the remains and said they intend to re-inter them in a different cemetery.

Dr. Strangelove, or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb (1964), Peter Sellers as the absurd U.S. President, Merkin Muffley. It’s one of his many roles in the Kubrick comedy, which include the psychopathic Dr. Strangelove and the manic Lionel Mandrake. Watch for a very young James Earl Jones as Lt. Lothar Zogg, if you want to be extremely disturbed.
