Explore Cambridge

We hope you had outstanding, chill and relaxed second weeks of school! Because it is only the beginning and it should not be too hard and demanding, we invite you to discover another remarkable spot with us. Today, our stop is Cambridge. As a fifth largest city in the state of Massachusetts, Cambridge is internationally known for Harvard University and, well, some tend to believe, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The heart of Cambridge is indeed in the Harvard Square where people from all over the world gather to bow in front of John Harvard. Besides several museums and historical spots such as Washington Elm, where Washington officially took command of the Continental Army at ceremonies, Longfellow National Historic Site, where Washington made his headquarters here during the siege of Boston from July 1775 through April 1776, and other Harvard and MIT Museums, there are also a few walking trails. One of them is the African American Heritage Trail, which includes twenty historic plaques across the city to honor notable African Americans who were abolitionists, authors, educators and office holders in Cambridge. Another spot worth your visit at this time of the year is Mount Auburn Cemetery with the tower that provides some really breathtaking panoramic views of Boston, Cambridge and eastern part of Massachusetts.

However, Cambridge is not all about walking and sightseeing. Students choose to do shopping in CambridgeSide Galleria, or just grab a meal in some of the most popular places in and around the Square such as Cinderella’s, Pinocchio’s, Mexican Grill, Mr. Bartley’s Burger, Boston Tea Stop, UNO’s, JP. Licks, Russell Tavern, and many more!

Being one of the most vibrant places in all of Massachusetts, we strongly recommend that you walk through the city from the touristic perspective. You will be surprised how many things remained unnoticed.

From Lev? Walk towards Eliot, then turn on Dunster St. 5 min to the Square. Cost: $0.

What kind of dining hall chicken are you? Answer this fun, sexy quiz to find out!

Your idea of a perfect first date involves:
- a) Seeing an independent film and then discussing it over coffee.
- b) Dinner at the Ritz, then dancing at an underground club.
- c) Rolling around in hot sauce.

How long do you wait before texting someone after a first date?
- a) Doesn’t matter—if I like them, I’ll text them right away.
- b) I never send the first text—they need to come to me.
- c) It depends on how long it takes for me to marinate completely.

Your favorite foods are:
- a) Oatmeal and water.
- b) Caviar and baby tiger.
- c) Red-spiced chicken.

If you answered mostly A’s, you are: grilled chicken.
People go to you when they want to look healthy, or when nothing else looks good. You’re pretty boring on your own, but are fun to toss into a Caesar salad, or a hummus wrap.

If you answered mostly B’s, you are: Broccoli-stuffed chicken.
You are sophisticated and complex, but people sometimes wonder how the broccoli gets there. Is it simply folded in, or injected with a syringe? Also, is the broccoli still healthy when it’s drenched in cheese and then stuffed into fried chicken?

If you answered mostly C’s, you are: Red-spiced chicken.
You are spicy, and generally well liked. You go well with rice dishes, but also are quite good on your own. You are very mysterious, and people often wonder how you came to be.

How do zebra stripes actually help them?
On a flamboyance scale from 1 to 10, the look seems like a clear "come eat me lion". However, most zebra predators are colorblind, making the pattern actually blend into the grassy background. When in a group, zebras' stripes blend into each other, making it hard for a predator to zone in on a particular zebra in a mass of confusing movement. The stripes also help zebras recognize each other, and even put off insects through the juxtaposition of polarized white and unpolarized black stripes. Brb, buying some zebra print.
