Caligula’s war against the sea: Bringing Hubris to a whole new level.

The Roman Emperor Caligula is known for his derangement, promiscuity, incest, cross-dressing, and draconian policies. Among his other idiosyncrasies, Caligula developed a belief in his own divinity. By the year 40 CE, Caligula appeared in public dressed as, among others, Hercules, Mercury, Apollo, and Venus. Not only did he refer to himself as a god when meeting with politicians, but he is cited in several documents as ‘Jupiter.’

Yet, Caligula was not satisfied. Determined to demonstrate his superiority even to the ‘other’ gods, the emperor ordered his troops to wage war against Poseidon, god of the sea. He thus led his army to the beaches of Italy, where he then instructed them, amid battle cries and trumpets, to toss their spears into the sea and attack the waves with their weapons. Obligated, his men followed these orders and claimed the spoils.

Caligula was later assassinated by his bodyguards.

Hair Today:

Moustaches, November, and you.

Common among men in Australia and New Zealand is the peculiar tradition of growing a moustache during the entire month of November. Known as “Movember,” a blend of November and Moustache (apparently), this tradition is used as a fundraiser for men’s health issues. Notably, fashionable appearance takes second fiddle to the moustache during Movember.

In the US, this trend is manifest in “No Shave November,” in which an entire beard, rather than a mustache, is grown.
