VALENTINE’S DAY ADVICE

Valentines Day is fast approaching, so the Hare Today wanted to bring you the best advice to make the most of the day for you and your loved one. Unfortunately, only one person didn’t already have an article ready for the week, meaning he got stuck with it, and we’re rather skeptical of his theories. Nevertheless, here they are:

On a Romantic Dinner:
Preparing dinner for your partner can be a great way to show that you love them. And nothing says, “I want to romance you” like making your significant other a frozen pizza. In the event that you cannot procure the finest that Digiorno has to offer, Spaghetti-Os or Hot Pockets (but only the ham and cheese ones) are suitable alternatives.

On music:
Learning an instrument to serenade your loved one can be a great way to add to your special day. But one piece of advice on the matter: no possible performance carries the raw seductive appeal that is Billy Ray Cyrus’s “Achy Breaky Heart” covered on banjo.

On asking that special person out:
In the event that you just haven’t worked up the courage to ask out The One, Valentines Day can be a great time to do so. The ideal method is to hide an engagement ring in their belongings for them to accidentally stumble upon. Make sure you stalk them so that you can see the exact moment that they find it; yelling “Finders Keepers!” right when they find it seals the deal. Now that you’re engaged, they have to date you!
Make sure you hide it in their personal things rather than in the HUDS servery area, though. While it sounds like a good idea for them to find a ring while scooping out their scalloped potatoes, there’s a chance that someone else gets the spoonful meant for them, and divorces can be expensive.

So there you have it. The Hare Today takes no responsibility if you try any of that, but Happy Valentines Day anyway!

MYSTERY MOVIE QUOTE

“If you’re a bird I’m a bird”

Last Week’s Quote was from Zoolander.
[“If there is anything that this horrible tragedy can teach us, it’s that a male model’s life is a precious, precious commodity. Just because we have chiseled abs and stunning features, it doesn’t mean that we too can’t not die in a freak gasoline fight accident.”]
HARE HOP DANCE

Does the prospect of Valentine’s Day have you down? Does February 14th remind you of nothing but loves lost, missed opportunities, and crumpled chocolate wrappers? No one’s judging; in fact, we’re commiserating. Asking that cutie from section out on ole Cupid’s day is just plain hard. There’s all this pressure: you’ve got to buy the right chocolates, pick the right outfit, wear the right perfume/cologne, and choose the right restaurant, all because the calendar says that this day, of all days, is the day of love.

But you know what?

There’s nothing special about Valentine’s Day, except for overpriced flowers and 45 minute waits at your local Outback’s Steakhouse.

BUT WAIT! Don’t lose hope just yet!

There’s a different day, a new day, a better day. And that day is FEBRUARY 15th. What does 2/15 have that 2/14 just can’t provide? No pressure, no $80 meals for two, no painfully obvious commercial ploys, and most importantly…

The Hare Hop, the Leverett Swing Dance Saturday, beginning with a lesson at 8:30pm, followed by a social dance from 9:30 until midnight. @ Lev D Hall Open to all students, completely free!

With live music by the Harvard Jazz Band, and great food including but not limited to a chocolate fountain!

Plenty of people have been asked to dinner on February 14th. How many people have been asked to the Leverett Hop Swing Dance on February 15th? Invite Cutie From Section, and watch the sparks fly as you (swing) dance the night away!
