Person of the Week

Name: Jason Flood — ’11
Concentration: Applied Mathematics/Economics

What kind of music do you listen to?
Well, about 50% of my iTunes is R&B, both classic and contemporary. My favorite artist of all time is Stevie Wonder, so I have just about every song he’s ever sung. The other half is a mix of a bunch of genres like hip-hop, jazz, gospel, and a few Top 40 songs from over the years. I might even have a few of my own recordings hidden somewhere in there, never to be shared with the world.

What is your most vivid childhood memory?
I will never forget the time I was selected to be an honorary ball boy for the New York Knicks in their game against the Portland Trailblazers when I was 12. I was helping the Blazers warm up, meaning I got to pass the ball to the likes of Rasheed Wallace and Scottie Pippen, and I sat on the floor behind the basket during the game. One moment I’ll never live down was when a ball rolled in front of the basket during warm-ups and I went to pick it up, unaware that Shawn Kemp (a former NBA All-Star center) was running toward the basket, about to dunk the ball. The result could have been disastrous, given that he’s about 6’10” and I had no time to get out of the way, but he just knocked me aside after coming down from the rim and neither of us was injured. The real ball boys told me to tell my friends that I got dunked on by Shawn Kemp, but now everyone knows that I’m just clumsy and oblivious.

What are some items on your bucket list?
I’d like to visit every continent at some point in my life, meaning I have Asia, Africa, Australia, and Antarctica remaining (depending on how you define the continents). Also on my list would be attending a major world event like the Olympics or the World Cup. And maybe at some point I’ll grow a ‘fro just to get people to stop bugging me to do it.

What are your post-college plans?
Next year, I’m going to be working for Google. After that, I have no clue. I’ve considered everything from starting my own business to working in government. Career advice anyone?

Say that your girlfriend gives you the choices of How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days, The Notebook, and Failure to Launch. Which one would you choose to watch?
Can’t answer this question for several reasons, one of which being that I’ve never seen any of these movies.

Where would you want to take a vacation this summer?
I’ve always wanted to travel through Europe. In particular, I’d want to visit Barcelona. I don’t speak Catalan, but I’ve heard the city is a lot of fun.

Are the Rangers going to beat the Yankees?
Of course not, that’s a stupid question. Didn’t you see the game on Friday? I look forward to World Series win #28.

What if you found out that the entire world is but a computer simulation, and you are a slave to a robot race? (Answer as crazily as possible)
Well, that wouldn’t have been all that different for my ancestors circa 1800, so I feel like my answer is biased from the start…but I’d probably engineer some type of revolution a la the Matrix. Although I’d like to think I’m a better actor than Keanu Reeves.

Acronyms

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S RIDDLE:
He should add up the number of all the servants who come in and then subtract that from 5050.

THIS WEEK'S RIDDLE:
There is a prison with 100 prisoners, each in separate cells, which are sealed off, soundproof and windowless. There is a lobby in the prison with a light bulb in it. Each day, the warden will pick one of the prisoners at random (even if they have been picked before) and take them out to the lobby. The prisoner will have the option to flip the light bulb switch if they want. The light bulb starts in the "off" position. When a prisoner is brought out to the lobby, he also has the option of saying "Every other prisoner has been brought out to the lobby." If a prisoner chooses to say this and it is true, all the prisoners will go free. However, if a prisoner chooses to say this and it's wrong, all the prisoners will be executed, so a prisoner should only say this if he knows it is true for sure. Before the first day of this process begins, all the prisoners are allowed to get together to discuss a strategy to eventually save themselves. What strategy could they use to ensure their eventual salvation?
