Bandit, in a rare public speaking appearance, had the following to say to the Harvard Football team before their big game against Yale this weekend. The following speech is transcribed here in its entirety:

“Men, this stuff that some sources sling around about this team being down after last week's loss to Penn is *. Harvardians love to play, traditionally. All real Harvard football players love the sting and clash of a competitive football game. First, you are here because you want a share of the Ivy League title. Second, you are here for your own self-respect.”

“All through your football careers you have complained about drilling. That, like everything else, has a definite purpose. The purpose is discipline, which breeds success. Discipline must be bred into every player. I don’t care for a player who isn’t disciplined. You men are accustomed to this or you wouldn’t be here. A man must be disciplined at all times if he wants to win this game.”

“We have the finest trainers, the finest equipment, the best spirit, and the best men in the world. Why, I actually pity those poor Yalies we’re going up against! Harvard Football never stops. I never want to hear of a player who stops giving their best effort to defeat the Yalies. Every man on this team plays a vital role. Don’t ever let up!”

It is reported that the team erupted in cheers of jubilation and a chorus of “Ten Thousand Men of Harvard” as Bandit regally exited the locker room.
MYSTERY QUOTE:

“You ask, what is our aim? I can answer in one word: victory; victory at all costs...”

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER:
James Bond: The World is Not Enough
(“If you’re Q, does that make him R?”)

What Your Favorite Fall Color Says About You

Red
Well aren’t you a fiery one! Your passion for red leaves is just as strong as your passion for everything else you set your mind to. You could care less about the current season—you’re just going to keep being you and doing the things you love to do.

Orange
Your favorite part of fall is the holidays—from the orange pumpkins on Halloween to the sweet potatoes on Thanksgiving. You’re the one who brings the holiday cheer to all of your friends as they moan about psets and papers and exams, oh my!

Yellow
A classic fall color—it looks like you must genuinely be a fan of fall. You’ve decked out your dorm room to fit the season, coordinated your wardrobe with the proper color scheme, and probably even jumped into one of those massive leaf piles in the yard. You spend your days shushing all of your friends as they mention the impending arrival of winter.

Green
Autumn? What’s that? Your love of green leaves keeps you yearning for summer every day of the year. You’ll even settle for spring! You just really want the weather to be as warm as your sunny personality.

Blue
You long for the days when all the leaves have fallen off the trees, and instead of seeing leaves, you look up and see straight to the bright blue sky! You’re always looking ahead and will never settle for the present. Bring on the snow!

Purple
This Hare Today reporter has never actually seen purple leaves, but we want to be inclusive! If you think you have seen purple leaves, we recommend that you visit an eye doctor (or pretend that they were red leaves, which let’s be real they probably were...).