Person of the Week

Name: Willa Pan Zhou
Concentration: Sociology with a focus on social entrepreneurship

What got you involved in social entrepreneurship?
I read a book by David Bornstein called How to Change the World; I took a class by Professor David Eckert, who teaches “Social Entrepreneurship” here—he’s awesome! Working with Ashoka, PBHA, and a whole bunch of random things. It was just a flow of events.

What do you want to do in the future?
I want to own a hotel, or a resort center, or an airplane. I want to build a social enterprise that can ignite and unite innovators for positive social change. I also want a bakery so I can feed people delicious things!

What are your plans for next year?
I’m off-cycle, so I will be here until the next fall semester. I’m going to write a thesis on organization effectiveness, something to the effect of the art of multiple-service delivery through social entrepreneurship.

Did you display such a enthusiasm for social entrepreneurship when you were younger?
One time I really wanted to eat an ice cream sandwich, but my mom wouldn’t let me, so I ran away and hid to eat it. I guess you can say that was the start of my social entrepreneurship track to make things happen.

Do you have any other special childhood memories?
I wrote a song in kindergarten and my teacher really liked it. She taught it to the whole class and we sang it at an assembly; it’s funny. The song is called “Peace is Sharing”. I never wrote it down, but they still sing it sometimes at my elementary school.

You seem pretty artistically inclined—what kinds of other activities do you do?
In high school, which was mostly street dancing and hip hop. And when I got here, I wanted to join every dance group there was on campus—I joined the AADT, Candela, Breakers, Expressions, and the Step team.

How do you have time to everything?
For a long time, I didn’t, but then I narrowed it down.

I’m told that you were on tv show. Is that correct?
Yeah! I was on a reality tv show for teenagers called “Endurance”. This was towards the end of my freshmen year of high school. I couldn’t tell anyone what was going on, so I just asked my principal if I could leave school early to be on tv and he said, “Yes!”

If your life were a movie, what would it be called?
Flow-riding, because my life is totally about living on the flow. I even lived on the Blackfeet reservation once for a summer public service project.
That Pre-med Guy: Bell Curves

Midterm season is in full swing, and nothing gets me more cynical than that Boltzmann distribution, that Gibbs measure, that bell curve. I have no doubt in my mind that every pre-med here came from two-above-standard-deville. However, there is now a whole 95% of the curve left to fill, and what is more painful than a bruised ego?

That is why when the grades come out for a midterm during lecture, an outburst akin to the sound you would hear from a pit of electrified zombies erupts from each student in the hall. It is enough to drown out Gabriel’s clarion call to judgment, as our apocalypse easily dwarves those of Biblical proportions. And it makes no difference what the average or standard deviation is.

If the mean is high, and by high I mean around an 85, everyone thinks, ‘Shoot, the exam was too easy, so it’ll be hard to get an A relative to the rest of the class. Plus, I always make careless mistakes, and my TF knows my handwriting, so he’ll definitely take off random points due to their keyboard rubric.’

“UUNNNNGGGHHHHHH.”

If the mean is low, and the standard deviation is high, everyone thinks, ‘Shoot, it’s difficult for me to get two standard deviations above the mean! But I probably did better than everyone else... right? If I didn’t, then there are plenty of people who did better and are bringing up the average!’

“AAAAAAAAAAAAAA.”

If the mean is low, but the standard deviation is low, everyone thinks, ‘Shoot, the exam was too hard, so I might not get above standard deviation, but I must trust to hope. I couldn’t possibly have scored a 60, right? Statistically, though, it’s not very likely that I did well, and if I don’t, I won’t get an A in this class, and my GPA won’t get me into Hopkins, and I’ll have to face the crushing loneliness of my years alone, poor, broken, and hungry.’

“AAAAARRRRRGGGGHHHHHH.”

So if you happen to pass by Science Center B and hear the anxious wailing of a million tormented souls, please disregard it.

Top Spring Break Destinations for 2011

1. Cancun
2. South Beach
3. Punta Cana
4. Europe (Portugal, Greece)
5. Puerto Vallarta
6. Acapulco
7. Ibiza
8. Rio de Janeiro
9. Hawaii (anywhere)

5 Do’s and Don’t For Spring Break at the Beach

DO:
1. Pack a bottle of sun tan lotion (Ronnie & Snookie are the exception, not the rule)
2. Drink lots of water
   (alcohol + dancing + general partying + beach = dehydration)
3. Cover your drink (that goes for you too, guys)
4. Run in a zig-zag if being chased by an alligator (won’t help much, but it will be pretty funny to watch—also applies to zombies, yeti, and people with guns)
5. Invite us next time

DON’T:
1. Let your friend go back with that creepy guy if he’s not in school anymore...grown-ups aren’t supposed to party with the kids.
2. Try and jump from your balcony into the pool (or at least have paramedics nearby)
3. Leave things out in your hotel room—your spring break could be somebody else’s holiday bonus season.
4. Carry too much money in your wallet; the inconvenience of going to the ATM is a lot easier to deal with than trying to get that $300 back from the police.
5. Make late-night calls to previous interests...no good ever comes of that.

Try these Tongue Twisters!

1. I cannot bear to see a bear
   Bear down upon a hare.
   When bare of hair he strips the hare,
   Right there I cry, “Forbear!”

2. Of all the felt I ever felt,
   I never felt a piece of felt
   Which felt as fine as that felt felt,
   When first I felt that felt hat’s felt.

Riddle: Sequence Table

The below is a number puzzle. It should be read left to right, top to bottom.
